

Can I adopt two puppies?

Thank you for choosing to adopt a puppy! We want to ensure each puppy gets the attention and care they deserve, so we do not adopt siblings or puppies from different litters together.

Between eight weeks and six months, a puppy is in the most influential stage of their life. They are developing relationships, testing boundaries, and learning to socialize. These weeks are incredibly important for their development and require a huge time commitment. By focusing your time on one puppy, you can ensure they are getting the training they need to mitigate and prevent unwanted behaviors in the future.

To help each puppy put their best paw forward in their new home, we do not adopt more than one puppy per household within a 6-month period. This allows each puppy to settle into their new home and ensures they receive proper care. Additionally, we recommend that the puppies you adopt are at least six months apart in age to promote a harmonious environment for both pets.
